ANALYSIS

Mary's France has been consistent throughout her seven-race career, hitting the board in five of those races including a 2nd behind G2W/G1P Tamahere in her last start in France last year. Since coming to America, Mary's France has been a bit unlucky, having been forced very wide in three of her four starts and getting bumped out of the gate in her US debut.

Though she hasn't been able to break through yet in America, Mary's France has some back class to her, having finished 2nd behind the high class Tamahere in her last race in her native country.

After she arrived here, Mary's France hasn't been able to catch a break, running into trouble in each of her four starts. Only beaten a length in her US debut, she was bumped soundly after the start from both sides before being forced three wide after making a sustained run, only missing by a length in the end (Race replay 📺), Head-On replay 📺).

After being given some time to acclimate, Mary's France made her four-year-old debut at Tampa Bay where she encountered a wide trip before finishing 3rd, beaten a half-length (Race replay 📺). She was 3rd again after giving five wide two races back and she managed to go five wide again last out in a six horse field before being impeded slightly in the stretch. That interference likely cost her the win as she went on to finish 2nd, beaten just a half-length (Race replay 📺).

RACE SCHEDULE

Even after running into some bad luck, Mary's France has shown the ability necessary to break through her first-level allowance condition. Below are some spots that we found suitable for her moving forward.
